Absolutely right, and I'd recommend communicating only with those you absolutely trust and even then, only give them more secure credentials to speak. We don't need a repeat of numerous cases of individuals being surrounded/mobbed by violent extremists and a good way to avoid that is to have right posed around organization and meeting times.

https://www.irccloud.com/irc/irccloud/channel/the_donald

IRC, Internet Relay Chat. Join me.

Yeah, I know there's a "Discord"... but what you don't know is... Discord is shutting down servers, left and right that support Trump, and talk about the election.

That won't happen on IRC... nobody "controls" IRC.

Now, you might mention that IRCCloud, is NOT IRC... and that it's centralized. That is true but the devs are not fags. I've known them for quite a while.

If for any reason we do have issues, I can spin up an isolated IRC server.

There are a lot of hams trained in emergency support that would need the bands to work properly and without interference. And, it's illegal. Aren't we supposed to not be the ones committing illegal acts? Some people don't know about the ham radio bands, what radios are allowed to work where, and why.

And yeah, if we are in a post-apocalypse scenario, maybe it doesn't matter anyway.

So because some other maybe emergency could possibly come up people on the ground fighting for us should not use them?

parent permalink save report block reply

– 10MeV 2 points 1 day ago +2 / -0

Oh, it's not a big deal. They're just sophisticated walkie talkies, with a good deal more range than usual. If you talk on a frequency someone else is using you'll mess them up. It's a really simple thing, not hard to grasp.

People buy them and use them on ham bands, creating interference, often out of complete lack of awareness there even are ham bands.

Never mind. This isn't the place to have this conversation. If the crew here is talking about what it sounds like they're talking about, it doesn't matter anyway. It sounds like it's likely to be a WROL situation.

Carry on. Never mind.

But in general, licensing is supposed to help everyone know the rules and coexist within the limited spectrum allocations available. That's the idea anyway.

You used to be able to transmit on FRS without a license and GMRS with only a $70 fee, but the fcc recently changed equipment requirements and the Baofengs and most jam radios don't meet that due to wattage and having a removable antenna. Whether it's enforced is the question

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Family_Radio_Service

Maybe start here and branch out with your research. Not sure how much time you have before things get bought out. You may also have to download the special programming software + drivers before sites go down too. ("programming is a scary word, its pretty easy")

Example Radio: <https://www.amazon.com/BaoFeng-BF-F8HP-Two-Way-136-174Mhz-400-520Mhz/dp/B00MAULSOK/>

CHIRP software: <https://chirp.danplanet.com/projects/chirp/wiki/Download>

Check youtube for instructions. Change the URL to "youtubepp.com" if you want to download and save the instructional videos for later.

If you get a knockoff tenway radio (from china) you need a special driver. Windows 10 overwrites the driver and breaks it. Sketchy download but it works.

The Baofengs are great for the money, have more power than 2 ways and can transmit on the FRS and GMRS freqs that 2 ways use, though the fcc changed the rules as to the legality of using those freqs due to wattage and having a removable antenna, even with a license. Not sure if they're heavily enforced.

Chirp is great, just software that programs freqs into the radio in seconds with a cable to connect to the computer. Manual programming these radios can be very confusing and tedious because the manual it comes with is shit.

There's a LOT of reasons to not use CB, but the truth is that ANY radio solution you choose will likely be overwhelmed quickly. The best solution is to agree to having directed networks that can relay information, VHF frequencies, preferably.

That sounds great in theory, but that assumes your groups can be both autonomous and compartmentalized. Its not possible. Surely there will be a big enough amount of people that don't grasp the concept of having opsec.

They will slip up and tryst the glowie or give information they think is not important to keep secret.

That requires you to actively pursue making an organization. The original idea is just to be careful about who you let into your friends group. If you're a group of friends, you don't need to worry about this except for...

Vetting anyone who would like to be involved in your friend group.

Your proving my point my man. Groups of friends attending a protest aren't trying to build an army. If you are actively trying to get people to join "an army" like antifa does.. you can do what you've listed. If you're attending a protest with a group of friends, you should be more cautious and not invite a potential glowie into your group to save yourself (without vetting).

Bottom line: you're telling people not to vet others when they attending protests and to invite everyone in with open arms. That's pretty shady.

Tox. Use qtox for example, that's on most platforms including Android.

Just understand that most ways that the corrupt intel agencies monitor people is directly at the device by various means to compromise them. IOS and Android both have massive holes and likely the NSA etc have their own backdoors to both.

Encryption is only a method to stop interception of comms.

Add extra points of interest, and label all POIs with a letter or pair of letters. Two letters gets you hundreds of places.

A message "Meeting at point B" doesn't mean anything to anyone without the map.

Anyone with a map doesn't have usable information without a message. There would be too many possible places. Not to say they couldn't use the map in their own way with their own group.

Instead of predefined POIs use a grid system or add for flexibility.

exactly. just like the founding fathers set up our country. each car load is a squad. one overseeing authority keeps them loosely bounds following same general goals. when infiltration happens the word gets out, central authority is dissolved and squads act independently to achieve primary stated goals and assemble finally at the march at the designated time using all sorts of alternate routes.

make broad plans for when you will leave a certain city, which direction you are heading on the interstate and how fast you will be going. Flash caution lights past onramps if you see cars pulled over on the shoulder waiting. meet up while rolling on the interstate towards DC, put a picture of pepe in your back window or something to be indentified, trade numbers out car windows using sharpies and paper, form a group chat while you're rolling -- one squad leader per car, only this person participates in the chat.

make a primary itinerary. A contingency might not be needed but can easily be formed while you are rolling. Adjust as necessary using group chat. Maybe even break the caravan in half or thirds and take alternate routes if you're being tailed.

don't overthink these infiltrators or we won't do anything at all. As they infiltrate, designate smaller and smaller leaders and split up to isolate the mole and keep them from reporting on or sabotaging the entire group.

Plan a meeting spot before entering DC. Rest area off the interstate or walmart parking lot or whatever. If antifa is there waiting or if an antifa (probably a lone driver among your ranks) shows themselves by attempting to shoot a video of your meeting: handle them with extreme bias. Undermine A.) their ability to continue following you B.) their ability to communicate with others or report on you electronically idk if this is the full origin but, glowie means "glow in the dark" which is kind of I think a double meaning thing. or multiple meanings. one they "glow in the dark" which means they obviously aint normal (in a men in black sense, or undercover cop sense) if you think someone is undercover you could say they "glow in the dark" because its obvious they stand out from what they should be.

they call them this because they go undercover and try to make people do things.

Id guess because of their resources and access, they can appear and disappear anywhere with no consequences so they glow when they appear, but act in the dark?

u/EvanGRogers

The real origin is a guy named Terry A. Davis. He was a genius computer engineer that developed schizophrenia (or something similar). He believed that God wanted him to build the 3rd temple of Jerusalem as a computer OS. He would live stream videos where he demonstrated the OS and would say crazy schizo stuff like how the CIA people are following him and glow in the dark. He mysteriously died a few years ago and is now a legend on the chans.

This is his most famous line talking about deep staters glowing in the dark: <https://youtu.be/AbG6u86t4bA>

Oh, he also said the n word a lot.

IIRC it comes from a now infamous post by Terry Davis, the creator of Temple OS, that said something to the effect of "these CIA n*ggers, they glow in the dark". The term then became synonymous with feds trying to infiltrate groups to get them to commit or agree to commit acts of violence/terrorism they could be arrested for.

I wholly support this advice, but just want to point out that DC Police loyal to a traitor mayor will be there, so it's not possible to make this a cuck-free event.

Fair point. Don't forget about encrypted and private chat apps like Riot and Signal!

I wish Cryptocat was still around (Edward Snowden used it), but it's been discontinued. I haven't seen any forks of it yet.

WARNING: DO NOT SHARE DETAILED LOGISTICAL PLANS FOR THE 6th OPENLY ON THIS SITE (hotels, specific meet up points, carpools etc). Glowies, Antifa and Shills monitor this board - use DM and lets make the 6th a cuck-free event.

Let them come. Let's do this.

Does anyone know how to operate WICKR ME app? I feel like it could be a great tool for encrypted private messages that can be burned

This is why I love America so much, and why every country on earth can never figure us out in war. We never know what we're doing, so they don't know what we're doing.
